

COVID SAMARITAN

Money is not all important but humanity and compassion are'

"We are in this together and we will get through this together." We all know these times are tough -- both financially or physically. People all over the world are losing their loved ones one after another at a fast rate in these Covid-19 times and we all can play the role of a saviour to help one another. Even I extended my helping hand to some loved ones. Is only money the important source in this cause? No! There is this saying -- "You don't need money to help others, you need a heart to help them".

I helped people by talking to them and listening to their problems to make them feel better. In these tough times, some people are physically ill and some are mentally ill. It's hard to find the cure for mental illness so I spent time talking to my grandparents about how they feel about things. And trust me even if you wish to help others in these times, it isn't important to lend them money, only a phone call or a text would be more than enough to make them feel important.

Truly speaking, people nowadays knowingly or unknowingly lack in the importance of humanity. I would like to add the fact of hope. Sometimes it isn't about being strong or wealthy, it can be about hope with which you can enlighten in yourself and your loved ones.

Don't forget the fact that it's okay to break down and worry sometimes. But never sit idle on that, utilize it. Try to know yourself, work on things that may help you in future. It is what I did and I still try to be better by either writing or reading. Try and do what you like and stay safe. Be someone's Covid Hero with humanity not wealth.

People nowadays knowingly or unknowingly lack in the importance of humanity, writes Shagun Kapoor, Class 8-D, Delhi Public School, Sector 45, Gurugram