

Workshop Report: Ink Your Inspiration

Delhi Public School, Gurgaon, hosted an enriching creative writing workshop titled, 'Ink Your Inspiration', on the 13th of November, in the school auditorium. The workshop was organised by 'Times of India' in collaboration with 'Pilot Pens'. This workshop, tailored for students of classes VII, VIII and IX aimed to foster creative thinking and effective writing skills, helping students articulate their thoughts with clarity and imagination.

Students were challenged to write stories on the spot, based on given prompts, encouraging quick thinking and imaginative expression. The students explored various aspects of storytelling, character creation, and narrative techniques. The session enabled students to don their creative hats and communicate their ideas confidently, allowing them to grasp the importance of language and structure in storytelling. All the participants were presented a pilot pen from the team of 'Times of India' and 'Pilot Pens'. It was also announced that the first three winners would receive recognition in the form of cash prizes.

The workshop concluded with a feedback from the students. Overall, the workshop was a great success, leaving the students inspired and eager to continue developing their writing skills. The workshop not only enriched their understanding of creative writing but also instilled in them a newfound passion for storytelling. The school extends its sincere appreciation to Times of India and Pilot Pens for providing this memorable and impactful experience.
